IMPERIAL PREFACE FOR WATER REPENTANCE

The Samādhi Water Repentance originated when National Master Wuda Zhixuan of the Tang dynasty met Honored Kanaka. Through samādhi water, he washed away enmity from past lives. Zhixuan then followed the instructions of the Great Awakened One and taught it as a repentance text to universally benefit those of profound minds in the future. Its blessings and virtues are unmatched.

Here, " samādhi " is the name for "proper sensation." To not indulge in sensations is called proper sensation. [In samādhi,] there is true emptiness, serenity, and stillness, and the present mind is unmovable. Its essence is simply in causing people to seek within themselves. People who are born in the world are not of superior wisdom; how could they commit transgressions through mistake without any reason, or without the fetters of karmic enmity from past lives?

The Tathāgata, expanding his compassionate intentions, initiated the method of repentance and reform. If one is able to earnestly repent and reform single-mindedly, then one's accumulated karmic transgressions will instantly disperse like ice [melting] into water. When bathing an impure body, there is no part of it remains cleansed; after washing a soiled garment, there is no part of it that is unclean; after scrubbing a dirty vessel, there is no part of it that is not pure. Its essence does not exceed even a square inch of space. Thus, it is said that the mind is the spirit of the body. For all wholesome actions, there are wholesome effects. For all unwholesome actions, there are unwholesome effects. Like a shadow following its caster, or an echo following its sound, its effects are swift and do not miss even the slightest hair.

This Samādhi Water Repentance was composed to benefit humans. Its merits are profound, and upon considering that Zhixuan was an eminent monk for ten lifetimes before experiencing retributions from his past, he was surely not an ordinary person. In the past, Sun Hao desecrated a metal statue and encountered retribution in death. Upon repenting and reform through confession, his calamities were averted. There are many cases like this; ordinary people should take them to heart, for without remorse or repentance and reformation, how could one ever cleanse [one's transgressions] and progress on virtuous paths? Without even a thread of unwholesome thoughts covering the mind, calamities are averted and both blessings and virtues will grow and increase. It is like how rain refreshes plants, causing them to grow and flourish. Although one's eyes are unable to see it, many people invisibly receive its beneficial dew. Furthermore, samādhi only exists within one's own mind. One does not need to seek externally.

I write this as a preface to the text and have had it carved [into woodblocks] to benefit beings as an expedient means. This is to draw samādhi from the great ocean and sprinkle it throughout the trichiliocosm to cleanse [the transgressions accumulated over] kalpas as numerous as specs of dust. Those who contemplate this will be cautious of where they are headed.

PREFACE OF THE WATER REPENTANCE OF THE KIND AND COMPASSIONATE SANCTUARY OF AWAKENING

It is said, aside from the sacred teachings of sūtra, vinaya, and śāstra, which were translated at the translation courts, have there been any texts composed by later sages which invoked any response? If one looks through each line and page for examples and cites the various texts, it is not easy to find such records of an efficacious text titled Water Repentance. Please explain its origins.

In the past, during the reign of Emperor Yizong of Tang (859–873 CE), there was a monk named Zhixuan who served under the title National Master Wuda. Before he was renowned, he was a lone monk who happened upon a monastic teacher from the capital who had forgotten where he lived. The monastic teacher had contracted kamala disease and the assembly was disgusted by him. Zhixuan stayed with him as a neighbor and often cared for him without any sign of loathing. When it was time for them to part, the monastic teacher was touched by Zhixuan's honor and thanked him, saying, "In the future, if you have any difficulties, you can go towards Pengzhou in the kingdom of Western Shu and find me at Nine Peaks Mountain. That mountain has two pines to mark it."

Afterwards, National Master Wuda stayed at Anguo Monastery and possessed radiant virtues. [Emperor] Yizong personally attended his Dharma gatherings and granted him a Dharma throne carved from aloeswood. [Receiving the Emperor's] great display of kindness, he suddenly grew a tumor on his knee. The tumor had a human face, complete with eyebrows, eyes, a mouth, and teeth. Every time he ate, he fed it with food and drink, and it would open its mouth to chew and swallow. There was no difference between the tumor and a human.

Despite seeking renowned physicians, they all waved their hands and remained silent. Upon remembering the words of the monk he once lived next to, he set out into the mountains to meet him. Up until the sky was dark, he traveled in the four directions. Then, he saw two pines among the misty clouds and was confident that their meeting was not misguided. He went towards it and came across a complex of lofty pavilions and vast halls, with gold and jade shining amongst each other. The monastic teacher stood at the door and greeted him joyfully. Because he stayed over for the night, he told the teacher about all the sufferings he was experiencing. The teacher said, "There is no harm. At the bottom of the mountain, there is a spring. Tomorrow at dawn, wash [your tumor] and it will be healed."

The next morning a child attendant guided him to the spring. Upon scooping up a handful of water, the human-faced tumor suddenly screamed loudly, "You must not wash yet! Your knowledge is profound, and you have studied both the past and present. Have you ever read the story of Yuan Yang and Yao Cuo in the Book of Western Han?" [Zhixuan] replied, "I have read it." [The tumor continued,] "Seeing that you have read it, then you should know that Yuan Yang killed Yao Cuo. You were Yuan Yang, and I am Yao Cuo. Cuo was cut in half at the waist in the Eastern City, and that enmity was unparalleled. For lifetime after lifetime, I sought vengeance against you, but for ten lifetimes you were an eminent monastic who was diligent and strict with the precepts and regulations. I could not obtain my revenge. Now, you received the favor of a human lord and gave rise to a mind of fame and gain, thus hurting your virtues. That is why I was able to hurt you. Now, you have encountered Honored Kanaka and will wash me with the Dharma water of samādhi. After I leave, I will no longer hold any grudges against you."

Upon hearing this, Wuda felt like his spirit was not stable in his own body. He quickly scooped a handful of water and washed the tumor. Pain seared through the core of his bones, and he fainted. Upon waking up, the tumor was nowhere to be seen. Thus, he knew that [the water] was a sign of the sages, for it was not something ordinary beings could know of. He wished to return and pay respects [to the monastic teacher], but upon returning, he could no longer see the monastery.

Thus, he built a small hut at that very spot which later became a monastery and composed a text. During the Zhidao reign of the Song dynasty, it was imperially granted the name Zhide Chan Monastery. There were eminent monastics who believed in Master [Wuda] and recorded this. They recorded the events and their details.

At that time, Wuda felt that this was extraordinary and thought deeply of the enmity which is accumulated over lifetimes. If it were not for sages, how could one obtain liberation? Because it was expounded as a repentance method and both venerated and recited day and night, it later circulated throughout the world. Now, the repentance text in three scrolls is the very text [which he composed]. With the idea of using samādhi water to wash away spiteful karma, he named it Water Repentance. It is said that this extraordinary case of Wuda invoking Kanaka's response was to give a proper name to and establish meaning in repaying one's roots.

Now, having read this preface, know that this is true and that its signs have manifested. Upon opening its scrolls, whether prostrating or reciting it, one should know the prior virtuous events which led to its origins. Also know that throughout the kalpas, its causes and effects are not obscured.

Respectfully listen! The Tathāgata manifests to respond to and universally benefit all beings; the Honored One practiced kindness and reverently record this. Just as how the moon is reflected in the water of a pure river, the kāmālā disease manifested as an illusory ailment. A moral downfall and deep attachment arose when the king favored [Master Wuda] and bestowed a precious throne upon him. Yao Cuo had harbored a grudge ever since the [Battle of the] Eastern City and searched far and wide; Yuan Yang, who had formed the enmity during the Western Han, was faced with inevitable retribution—it was only a matter of time. Thus, cause and effect were not in vain. From the Han to the Tang dynasty, [the grudge] was pulled throughout time, as [the pursuit of ultimate] truth and worldliness lead away from each other. However, upon violating the precepts, demonic enmity appeared, and thus [Master Wuda was afflicted] by a tumor which grew a human face. It was impossible to stop the pain and suffering that came from this tumor.

By encountering and befriending a sacred being, he accepted instructions and believed in them. He traveled deep into a dark forest of fragrant grasses and wandered in search for a thousand miles. Encountering a mountain pass where white clouds soared in the skies above, he passed through land after land and peak after peak. With earnest sincerity, his toil was effortless; with profound hope, his vows would lead him to his destination. Twin pines formed a canopy over the entrance, and upon glimpsing it, his sorrows disappeared. The Nine Peaks soared into the sky, revealing a monastery which shone with a brilliant golden radiance. Upon being welcomed, he announced that he wished to quickly cure his illness. Comforting him, [the monk] explained that he could be free [of the illness] by bathing in a spring of sweet water. At the last part of the night, the lonely sound of a bell dispelled the darkness and the peaks and valleys filled with light.

Honored Kanaka taught him to wash [his tumor] with the Dharma water of samādhi. National Master Wuda eradicated his afflictions from past lifetimes. Although the event happened just once, its Dharma circulates perpetually. It was compiled as a liturgy in three scrolls—as such, humans and devas venerate it. It is used to repent for the transgressions of the ten unwholesome deed which arise from one’s body, speech, and mind—as such, sacred and ordinary beings seek refuge in it. Proclaiming its teachings, one directs the compassionate ferry to transcend the ocean of fear. Venerating its profound names, one walks the path to awakening to forever leave the wheel of suffering. Leaving our defiled home of the five degenerations; we are born together in the pure land of nine grades of lotuses. [This text] benefits both our friends and foes; its virtues reach both the living and the deceased. Thus, as the repentance text is about to begin,

Within the rays of golden light are infinite manifested buddhas and manifested bodhisattvas who form his retinue. Walking with graceful and peaceful steps, large jeweled blossoms rain down as he approaches the practitioner. His elephant opens its mouth, and atop the elephant's tusks are ponds with jade goddesses drumming, dancing, strumming, and singing. The sounds [of the music] are subtle and wondrous. They praise the Mahāyāna, the Path of One Reality. After the practitioner sees this, he is delighted and respectfully prostrates. Expanding the wondrous path of the One Vehicle and repenting all transgressions, we rely on and proclaim to the Seven Buddhas, World-Honored Ones: may the compassionate fathers of the ten directions who possess serene marks, characteristics, and radiance, witness our sincerity! Now, on behalf of this assembly of your disciples who seek repentance, we respectfully face the base of your golden lotus throne and practice the Water Repentance Dharma Gate. Now, we begin the first scroll by entering the sanctuary. Within this sanctuary, we and our fellow practitioners have purified our three karmas, and we are single-mindedly concentrated as we burn incense, scatter flowers, kneel, and join our palms. We venerate the Triple Gem of the ten directions, seek refuge in the Golden Sage of Great Awakening, and sincerely confess [our transgressions] to repent and reform for them. We humbly think of how this assembly of your disciples was deluded to the one nature and thus drowned in the four kinds of birth. Not realizing the one truth, we transmigrated in the six realms. Through our body, speech, and mind, we were bound by desire, anger, and ignorance, thus committing various unwholesome deeds and creating limitless karmic obstacles. We followed falsity and evil, giving rise to many kinds of transgressions. Thus, the Tathāgata proclaimed a teaching of expedient means. We now sincerely repent and reform by relying on the pure assembly and reciting this efficacious text to cleanse our transgressions and adorn ourselves with pure precepts. These are our vows and the Buddha will surely empathize with us. We sincerely prostrate to the One of Great Compassion, invisibly imbuing us with supportive aid!

Throughout the ten directions, there are none who can compare.

In all that I have seen throughout the worlds,

There is nobody who resembles the Buddha.

[Water Repentance of Kindness and Compassion – Scroll One]

All buddhas are compassionately mindful of sentient beings and teach the Compiled Method of the Water Repentance Sanctuary of Awakening on our behalf. Because the defilements of sentient beings are heavy, who is without transgression? Who is without affliction? The ignorant practices of us unenlightened beings are concealed by our own lack of wisdom. We associated with evil friends, our minds were afflicted and disturbed, we gave rise to [self-]nature without knowing, and we were lax and arrogant. We did not have faith in the buddhas of the ten directions, nor did we have faith in the honored Dharma or the sacred Sangha. We were not filial to our parents and six kinds of relatives. At the prime of our lives, we were lax and arrogant. We desired all wealth and treasures, desired all musical entertainment, and desired all sexual pleasures.

Our minds gave rise to desire, and our thoughts gave rise to afflictions. We associated with unvirtuous people and lusted for evil friends without knowing to repent and reform. Or, we killed all sentient beings, or we consumed intoxicants and became deluded, lacking a mind of wisdom. Today, we sincerely repent and reform for each and every one of these past offenses as well as the evils we are currently conducting. Today, we sincerely repent and reform for all of these, not daring to commit any future transgressions.

Today, your disciples in the assembly sincerely seek refuge in all buddhas of the ten directions, throughout the realms of empty space; the great bodhisattvas, pratyekabuddhas, arhats, and those of the Four Fruitions and Four Progressions; King Brāhma and Emperor Śakra; the Eightfold Division of Devas and Nagas; and the entirety of the sacred assembly,

Having prostrated to the buddhas, again, repent and reform. When one wishes to repent, it is necessary to first venerate the Triple Gem. This is because the Triple Gem is a virtuous friend and field of merit for all sentient beings. If one can seek refuge in it, then one can eradicate limitless transgressions and gain limitless blessings. It can cause the practitioner to be free from the suffering of birth and death and obtain the joy of liberation. Thus, your disciples in the assembly seek refuge in all Buddhas of the ten directions, throughout the realms of empty space; seek refuge in all honored Dharmas of the ten directions, throughout the realms of empty space; and seek refuge in all sacred Sanghas of the ten directions, throughout the realms of empty space!

Today, we, your disciples, are repenting and reforming precisely because since beginningless time, we have been at the stage of ordinary beings. Regardless of class and status, our offenses are limitless. Whether these offenses were born from our Three Karmas or rose from our Six Faculties; whether these were internal—born of our deviant thoughts, or external—created from various defilements; the Ten Unwholesome Deeds grew in this way to become the Eighty-Four Thousand Gates of Affliction. Though these offenses are limitless, described in general, they fall under three categories without exception. First are afflictions, second is karma, and third is result. These three phenomena can obstruct the sagely path and the wondrous affairs among humans and devas. Therefore, the sūtras catalog these as the Three Obstructions. Thus, the buddhas and bodhisattvas teach the expedient means of repentance and reformation to eradicate these Three Obstructions and cause the Six Faculties, Ten Unwholesome Deeds, and even the Eighty-Four Thousand Gates of Affliction to all be pure. Therefore, your disciples in the assembly repent and reform for the Three Obstructions today with the supreme mind of improvement. For those who wish to eradicate the Three Obstructions, what kind of mindset should one use that can cause these obstructions to be eradicated? First, one should give rise to the Seven Kinds of Mind as expedient means. Then these obstructions can be eradicated.

What are these seven? First is remorse and shame, second is fear, third is dispassion, fourth is to give rise to the bodhi mind, fifth is seeing friends and foes as equal, six is be mindful of and repay the Buddha's kindness, and seventh is contemplating the empty nature of transgressions.

Regarding the first mind of remorse and shame, one should think: Śākyamuṇi Tathāgata and I were both originally ordinary beings, but the World-Honored One has attained awakening for innumerable kalpas numbering the grains of dust and sand while we still indulge in the defilements of the Six Dusts and eternally tumble in the cycle of birth and death without any end in sight. This is truly a matter in this world which is remorseful, shameful, embarrassing, and disgraceful.

Regarding the second mind of fear, the physical, verbal, and mental karma of ordinary beings is always resonating with offenses. Through these causes and conditions, at the end of our lives, we should descend into the realms of hell, animals, and hungry ghosts to endure limitless suffering. This is truly startling, frightening, terrifying, and fearsome.

Regarding the third mind of dispassion, we should always observe that within birth and death, there is only impermanence, suffering, emptiness, non-self, impurities, and false forms which resemble bubbles in the water—suddenly appearing and suddenly disappearing. Since the distant past, we have cycled through [birth and death] like a cart's wheel, undergoing birth, old age, sickness, and death and the burns of the Eight Sufferings without any moment of pause.

We, the assembly, only see our bodies—from head to toe—as only having thirty-six parts: head hair, body hair, nails, teeth, eye crust, tears, saliva, filth, sweat, urine, feces, skin, tissue, blood, flesh, tendons, veins and arteries, bone, marrow, fat, grease, brain, membrane, kidneys, heart, lung, liver, large intestine, small intestine, red phlegm, white phlegm, stomach, and bowels. In this way, the Nine Orifices constantly flow. Thus, the sūtras state that this body is formed through a collection of sufferings and all of it is impure. How could there be a wise person who relishes this body? Birth and death are comprised of such unwholesome phenomena and should be regarded with loathing and dispassion.

Regarding the fourth mind of giving rise to the bodhi mind, the sūtras state that one should seek the Buddha's body, which is the Dharma body. It is born through limitless merits and virtues as well as wisdom. It is born through the Six Pāramitās. It is born through kindness, compassion, joy, and equanimity. It is born through the Thirty-Seven Factors of Awakening. The tathāgata's body is born through all of these merits and virtues as well as wisdom. One who wishes to obtain this body should give rise to the bodhi mind and seek omniscience; permanence, bliss, self-nature, and purity; the fruit of sarvajña; purify the buddha's land; assist sentient beings; and not be attached to one's body, life, and possessions.

Regarding the fifth mind of seeing friends and foes as equal, one should give rise to a mind of compassion towards all sentient beings without differentiating between self and other. Why is this? If one sees friends different from foes, then that is discriminating. Because of this discrimination, attachment to form arises. This attachment to form leads to the causes and conditions for afflictions to arise. Afflictions are the causes and conditions for unwholesome karma, and unwholesome karma forms the causes and conditions for the fruition of suffering.

Regarding the sixth mind of repaying the buddha's kindness, in limitless kalpas past, the Tathāgata offered his head, eyes, marrow, brain, limbs, hands, and feet; his nation and kingdom; his wife and children; his elephant, steed, and Seven Treasures. On our behalf, he practiced austerities.

This kindness and virtue is truly difficult to repay. Thus, the sūtra states, “Even if one were to bear him on one’s head and shoulders out of deep respect, for as many kalpas as there are grains of sand in the Ganges River, one could not repay him.”¹ We, who wish to repay this kindness, should be courageous and diligent in this world; work hard and endure suffering, unconcerned with our body and life; establish the Triple Gem and propagate the Mahāyāna; and transform sentient beings so that all attain Proper Awakening.

Regarding the seventh mind of contemplating the empty nature of transgressions, transgressions lack an inherent nature and arise through causes and conditions. They exist through distortions. Since they arise through causes and conditions, they cease through causes and conditions.

They arise through causes and conditions such as lusting to be with evil friends and behaving improperly. They cease through causes and conditions such as the repentance and reformation today, which cleanses our minds. Therefore, the sūtras state that the nature of transgression is not internal, not external, and not in between. Thus, we know that the transgressions are originally empty [in nature].

Having given rise to these Seven Kinds of Mind, next we contemplate the buddhas and worthy sages of the ten directions and join our palms while admitting our [faults]. Filled with remorse and shame, we vow to change. Purifying our hearts and cleansing our insides, through this repentance and reformation, what offenses can remain unabolished? What merits are not born? If this is not the case, then one is either lax and unconcerned, or giving rise to agitated thoughts and emotions. This is merely exhausting one's body. What benefit could there possibly be? Furthermore, one's life is impermanent like a candle. If just one breath is missed, then one is the same as ashes and dust. The retribution of suffering in the Three Lower Realms are instantly on one's body, and no amount of money, treasure, or material possessions can provide an escape. Somber and dark, there is no benevolent pardon, nor anybody to undergo these sufferings on one's behalf. Do not say, "I have not committed these transgressions in this life, and so I cannot sincerely repent and reform." The sūtra states that when ordinary beings even raise their foot and take a step, are all transgressions. Furthermore, in past lives, we have all committed limitless unwholesome deeds which follow us like a shadow and its form. If we do not repent and reform, these transgressions and evils will increase day by day. Thus, know that the Buddha did not permit concealing one's flaws. Instead, confess one's past transgressions as the Vimalakirti Sūtra teaches. Therefore, drifting in the Sea of Suffering is precisely because of concealing [one's transgressions]. Thus, we, your disciples, confess as well as repent and reform for all transgressions today without concealing them any further. Of the Three Obstructions, the first is affliction, the second is karma, and the third is result. These three phenomena mutually lead to each other. Because of afflictions, unwholesome karma arises. Because of unwholesome karma, one obtains suffering as a result. Thus, your disciples in the assembly sincerely repent and reform today.

First, we should repent and reform for the Obstruction of Afflictions. These afflictions arise from the mind. How does this happen? Due to mental karma, body and speech follow in action. There are three kinds of mental karma. First is greed and desire, second is anger and aversion, third is ignorance. Because of ignorance, wrong view arises and one commits unwholesome acts. Thus, the sutra states that actions of desire, aversion, and ignorance can cause sentient beings to fall into the realms of hell, hungry ghosts, and animals, where they experience suffering. If they are born as humans, then they will be poor, destitute, lonely, homeless, vicious, spiteful, stubborn, and dull.

In their delusion, they do not know that these afflictions are retributions and that mental karma causes these terrible results. Thus, today, we sincerely return our lives in refuge to the buddhas and request compassion through repenting and reforming.

These afflictions are subject to all sorts of blame by the buddhas, bodhisattvas, and sages who grasp reality. They also call these afflictions enemies. Why is this? Because these afflictions are able to sever the root of the wisdom life of sentient beings. They also call these afflictions thieves. Because these afflictions are able to steal the virtuous Dharmas of sentient beings. They also call these afflictions turbulent rivers because these afflictions are able to sweep sentient beings into the Great Sea of Suffering of birth and death. They also call these afflictions shackles because these afflictions can lock sentient beings in the prison of birth and death without any way out. This is why the Six Realms continue, and the Four Forms of Existence do not end; unwholesome deeds are limitless, and the fruits of suffering do not cease. One should know that these are all faults of afflictions. Thus, today, we give rise to this virtuous mind of improvement and request compassion through repenting and reforming.

Since beginningless time until today, we, the assembly, whether as human, celestial, or other beings within the Six Realms, have filled our hearts and consciousnesses with ignorance and disturbed and harmed all sentient beings in the Six Realms and Four Forms of Existence, whether committing all transgressions because of the Three Poisons, these transgressions harm and disturb the worthy sages and the Four Forms of Existence, fill the Three Realms and extend throughout the Six Realms without any place to escape. Today, we sincerely pray to the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions. We are remorseful and shameful as we repent and reform for all of these.

Having prostrated to the buddhas, again, repent and reform. In explaining repentance and reformation, fundamentally, it is rectifying the past and cultivating for the future; eradicating evils and giving rise to virtues. Of the humans in this world, who has not made any mistakes? Because those who are learning lose their mindfulness, afflictions arise. Even an arhat forms habits and creates [karma] through their body, speech, and mind. How much more so for unawakened beings who believe they are faultless? However, the wise realize this quickly and are able to change, whereas the ignorant conceal [their mistakes] and cause them to grow. Thus, one accumulates habits in the eternal night without any expectation of dawn or awakening.

If one is able to confess as well as repent and reform with remorse and shame, then how could one merely eradicate offenses? One would also gain limitless merits and virtues as well as establish the wondrous result of the Tathāgata's nirvāṇa. If one wishes to practice this method, then externally, one should first tidy one's appearance, be solemn in behavior, and venerate an honored image; internally, one should give rise to reverence, be immersed in the method of visualization, and sincerely give rise to the Two Kinds of Mind. What are these two? First, think to oneself, my life and body is impossible to preserve forever. One morning, it will decay and disperse without knowing when this body will return. If I continue to not value the buddhas and worthy sages, then I will surely meet evil friends and create plenty of unwholesome karma.

Then, I will fall into the abyss of the dangerous realms. Second, think to oneself, although I have been able to encounter the Tathāgata's proper Dharma in this life, I do not work to propagate the sacred seeds of the Buddhadharmā; purify my body, speech, and mind; and abide in virtuous Dharmas. Up until now, we behaved unwholesomely in private and concealed these actions, saying that others will not know and that nobody saw it. We hid these in our minds and were arrogant and shameless. This is a truly ignorant mistake indeed. Now, the buddhas of the ten directions, great bodhisattvas, celestial beings, deities, and sages have manifested. When have they not used their pure celestial eyes to see the evil transgressions that we committed? Furthermore, there are visible and invisible spirits that record offenses and merits without a hair of error. Regarding a person who has committed transgressions, at the end of their life, the Ox-Headed Warden of Hell records their essence and spirit, debating and investigating their rights and wrongs before King Yāma. At this time, all of their enemies come to testify, each saying, "You mutilated my body, then fried, boiled, steamed, and roasted it," or, "You first robbed me of all of my wealth and possessions, then separated me from my family. Today, I finally get to take advantage of you." When they appear and testify, how could anybody dare deny [their testimonies]? One can only accept the retribution of past calamities willingly. As the sūtras explain, the hells do not punish people unjustly.

If someone forgets the many transgressions they habitually committed, then at the end of their life, then the locations where they committed the offense and all of the forms appear before them. Each of them say, "In the past, you did such and such a deed to me. How could you deny this now?" At this time, the transgressor has nowhere to conceal [the offenses]. Thus, King Yāma clenches his teeth, sentencing them to hell. Even after limitless kalpas, they are unable to seek an escape. This matter is not distant, nor does it concern others. It is on our bodies—we committed the deeds ourselves and we will undergo the retribution ourselves. Although the closest relationship is between father and son, once we face the end, there is nobody who can undergo the retribution on another's behalf. We have all obtained this human body, which is not infected with various illnesses. We should each be diligent and work urgently, greatly fearing that when the end arrives, it will be too late to reform. Because of this, we sincerely request compassion through repenting and reforming.

From beginningless time until today, we have accumulated ignorance which obstructs our mind's eye, went along with the nature of afflictions and committed transgressions in the Three Periods. Today, we sincerely repent and reform for all afflictions, up to and including the Four Attachments and other conditioned afflictions, whether they be from indulging in passion and attachments, giving rise the afflictions of desire; or harboring the afflictions of violence through aversion and anger; or being unable to end our afflictions due to mental delusions; or underestimating afflictions due to arrogance; or the afflictions of hesitation due to doubts regarding the Noble Path; or the afflictions of wrong view due to falsely claiming that there is

Through the merits and virtues born from repenting and reforming all afflictions born of mental karma such as desire, aversion, and ignorance, we vow that for birth after birth, lifetime after lifetime, we will remove the banner of arrogance; dry the river of passion and desires; extinguish the flames of aversion and anger; dispel the darkness of ignorance and delusion; remove the roots of doubt; cut through the net of wrong views; truly understand the Three Realms as a prison, the Four Elements as venomous snakes, the Five Aggregates as bandits,

How many past transgressions were there for the tumor to resemble a human face?

With one handful of [water from] the pure spring, it disappeared entirely.

Giving rise to empathy for himself and then for others, [Master Wuda] expounded on this as a method of repentance; its waves of benevolence cleanse perpetually!

May you radiate with the brilliance of a thousand suns and witness us in our momentary dedication of merits. On behalf of this assembly of your disciples, we have gathered the present pure assembly to practice the efficacious text of samādhi. We have now completed the merits and fruitions of the first scroll. Within the sanctuary, we and our fellow practitioners have burned incense, scattered flowers, kneeled, and joined our palms to repent for past transgressions through relying on the text, walked and circumambulated, as well as invoked and sung the [Buddha's] profound names. May all of the merits and virtues accumulated [through these practices] be first extended in dedication to the eternally abiding Triple Gem of True Compassion; to the Dharma protectors and various devas beneath the assembly; to the spirits of the higher, middle, and lower realms; as well as to the limitless spirits both near and far.

We also humbly vow that through these merits and virtues, all will give rise to a mind of joy, blessings will flow and irrigate the human realm and the heavens above, transform those in this and other realms. The virtuous results from perfecting the Sanctuary of Awakening are dedicated on behalf of this assembly, your disciples who are seeking repentance, may all transgressions be absolved and all offenses be resolved, may auspiciousness arrive and blessings accumulate, and may all seek rebirth in the Pure Land. Furthermore, we humbly wish that all karmic transgressions in this life melt like ice, that all karmic conditions be purified, that we all are single-mindedly awakened and turn towards the truth of One Reality, that we all have a single thought of returning to the light and create the wondrous path of the One Vehicle. May all conditions of suffering become instruments of bliss, and may karmic afflictions be showered upon so that all obtain refreshing coolness.

May our ancestors and those who have passed away affirm their rebirth in the Pure Land; may our surviving relatives continually enjoy the extents of their natural lifespan. May both our friends and foes bathe in the waves of benevolence together; and may both ordinary and sacred beings ascend to the jeweled ground in unison. Now, we have relied upon the text in repentance and reform. Still fearing that the finer [transgressions] are difficult to eradicate, we again implore the honored assembly to seek repentance and reform together!

Prajñāpāramitā Heart Sūtra

While practicing the profound prajñāpāramitā, Avalokiteśvara Bodhisattva clearly looked into the five aggregates, and overcame all ills and dissatisfaction by seeing them as all empty. Śāriputra! Form is no different from emptiness, emptiness is no different from form; form is just emptiness, emptiness is just form; so too are sensation, perception, volition, and consciousness. Śāriputra!

This is the characteristic emptiness of all dharmas: they neither arise nor cease, are neither impure nor pure, neither increase nor decrease. Therefore, in emptiness, there is no form, no sensation, perception, volition nor consciousness; no eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body nor mind; no form, sound, scent, taste, touchable object nor mental formation; no realm of sight, up to no realm of mind; no ignorance and no end of ignorance, up to no aging and death and no end of aging and death; no dissatisfaction, origination, cessation or path; no wisdom and also no attainment. By the absence of attainment, bodhisattvas, having relied on prajñāpāramitā, have no mental hindrances; because there are no hindrances, they have no fear and leave inverted dream-like delusions far behind, ultimately reaching nirvāṇa. All buddhas of all times, having relied on prajñāpāramitā, thus attain anuttarāsaṃyaksambodhi. Therefore, know that prajñāpāramitā is the great spiritual mantra, the great illuminating mantra, the unexcelled mantra, the unequaled mantra; able to dispel all dissatisfaction, it is true, not deceptive. Thus the prajñāpāramitā mantra is proclaimed. Recite it this way: gate gate pāragate pārasaṃgate bodhi svāhā!
