Flowers are presented to Mañjuśrī and Samantabhadra,
For the herbaceous and woody peonies are truly worthy of admiration.
Hundreds of flowers are presented in the Golden Hall.
As the flowers blossom and wilt, they transform into golden lotuses.
The blue-robed child presents flowers before the Compassionate Lord.

Prayer of Entering Repentance, Scroll Two

Respectfully listen! When one speck of dust is purified, sweet dew trickles from the clouds of loving-kindness; when the two practices are perfectly illuminated, the jade ū rṇā flutters on the [Buddha's] golden appearance. Whether manifesting in the thirty-two responses or in the trillion-fold bodies, you sit upon the jeweled lotus platform, witnessing these merits and virtues. On behalf of this assembly of your disciples, we practice the Samādhi Repentance Method of Kindness and Compassion. We now begin the second scroll by entering the sanctuary. We, both monastics and laity, are sincere and devout as we practice and uphold [this teaching] in accordance with the Dharma. We burn turuṣka incense and scatter white lotus blossoms as an offering to the Triple Gem of the ten directions.

We invoke and proclaim the Buddha's profound names and diligently make prostrations to confess our transgressions and defilements. We, your disciples, are urgently mindful of how we have been bound by the two obstructions, given rise to the two kinds of inverted views, been deluded to the truth and sought the false, turned our backs on awakening to revile in defilement. Before the Triple Gem, we have not given rise to respect and faith, been unfilial to our two parents, practiced desire and anger through our speech and mind, and killed living creatures for devouring, thus committing thousands of transgressions and creating myriads of karma since many kalpas ago until this very lifetime. Without sincerely practicing this repentance method, how could one absolve and distance oneself from such transgressions? Thus, we seek refuge in the Great Awakening, confess, as well as repent and reform.

These are our vows and the Buddha will surely empathize with us. We sincerely prostrate to the One of Great Compassion, invisibly imbuing us with supportive aid!

The thirty-two solemnly adorned and subtly wondrous marks
Are cultivated over three great asaṃkhyeya kalpas.

With a face like the full moon and eyes like lotus blossoms,

All in the heavens above and in the human realm [below] reverently pay respects.

All buddhas are compassionately mindful of sentient beings and teach the Compiled Method of the Water Repentance Sanctuary of Awakening on our behalf. We now return our lives in refuge to all buddhas!

[ Water Repentance of Kindness and Compassion – Scroll Two ]

Having prostrated to the buddhas, again repent and reform. Together, our bodies and minds are now serene and tranquil, without flattery and without obstruction. It is precisely the time to give rise to virtues and eradicate evils. Furthermore, prior to eradicating transgressions, we should each give rise to Four Kinds of Observation as a preliminary practice. What are these four? First is observing causes and conditions, second is observing results and effects, third is observing one's own body, and fourth is observing the Tathāgata's body.

First, observing causes and conditions, know that our transgressions originate from ignorant, unwholesome thinking.

Lacking the strength of proper observation, we did not recognize them as offenses; abandoned our virtuous friends as well as the buddhas and bodhisattvas; and followed demonic paths, practicing deviant and dangerous methods. Like a fish biting a hook, we do not know our predicament; like a silkworm making a cocoon, we bind and trap ourselves; like a moth flying into a flame, we burn and obliterate ourselves. Due to these causes and conditions, we are unable to leave [the cycle of birth and death] on our own.

Regarding the second observation of results and effects, all evil and unwholesome karma such as the inexhaustible results of suffering from tumbling in the Three Periods, sinking in the boundless, great sea of darkness while being devoured by the Rākṣasas of Affliction.

The future iterations of birth and death are dark and endless. Even if one is born as a Wheel-Turning Monarch and reigns over the Four Continents, flying with ease and possessing the Seven Treasures, after one's life comes to an end, one cannot evade the results and effects of the evil realms. The results and effects of the Four Emptinesses are the Lords of the Three Realms. When their blessings are exhausted, they are reborn as pests in the neck of a cow. Not to mention everybody else who does not have such blessings and virtues while continuing to be lazy and not diligently repent and reform. This is like holding a boulder while sinking in a pool; it is impossible to seek an escape.

Third, observe one's own body. Although we have an awakened nature as a proper cause, it has been concealed by a dark jungle of afflictions.

Without the cause of understanding's strength, it is impossible to reveal this. We should now give rise to the supreme mind of destroying the heavy obstructions from ignorance and delusion, ending the illusory causes of the suffering of birth and death, manifest the Tathāgata's awakened wisdom of great illumination and establish the wondrous result of supreme nirvāṇa.

Fourth, observe the Tathāgata's body. Unmoving and shining serenely, it transcends the Four Lemmas and ends the Hundred Disagreements; it is replete with the various virtues, and blazes while eternally abiding. Although it goes on to enter extinction as an expedient means, it has never abandoned its compassionate vow to save all for even a moment. By giving rise to this mind, it can be said that this is an essential practice of eradicating transgressions and eliminating obstructions. Thus, we sincerely seek compassion through repenting and reforming. Since beginningless time until today, we have nurtured afflictions so that day by day, they grow deeper and stronger. They cover our eyes of wisdom so that we are unable to see; sever our virtues so that they do not continue; create the afflictions that obstruct us from seeing the Buddha, hearing the proper Dharma, and respecting the sacred Sangha; create the afflictions that obstruct us from seeing the wholesome and unwholesome actions committed in the past and the future, as well as escape afflictions; the afflictions that prevent us from being honored among humans and celestial beings; the afflictions that obstruct us from experiencing the meditative bliss of the Form Realm and Formless Realm;

the afflictions that obstruct us from learning the knowledge and views of the Fifth Stage, Sixth Stage, and Seventh Stage; the afflictions that obstruct us from learning the mutual illumination of the Eighth Stage, Ninth Stage, and Tenth Stage; and the afflictions that obstruct us from learning the various practices over millions of asaṃkhyeya kalpas that lead to the fruition of Buddhahood. Such obstructions are limitless and boundless. Today, we, your disciples, sincerely face the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions to repent and reform with remorse and shame, wishing that all of these will be eradicated.

Through the merits and virtues born from repenting of all these afflictions which obstruct our practices, no matter where we are, may we: always be born in ease;

never be trapped in the cycle of accumulated karmic action; be able to travel throughout the ten directions in a moment's thought using wish-fulfilling powers; purify the buddhas' lands and transform sentient beings; be unobstructed in reaching the various deep states of meditative concentration and developing knowledge; possess a mind capable of encompassing all teachings and be able to expound on them endlessly and without attachment; obtain mastery of mind, mastery of phenomena, and mastery of expedient means; forever sever all of these afflictions and accumulated habits of ignorance so that they do not continue any further; and complete the sagely way, which is as brilliant as the sun. Having made vows, we return our lives in refuge and venerate the buddhas!

Having prostrated to the buddhas, again, repent and reform. We have briefly repented for our obstructions of affliction. Now, we should sequentially repent and reform for our karmic obstacles. Karma decorates the realms so that in each and every place, we do not have a second thought of wanting to leave and obtain liberation. Thus, the results and effects of the six realms have various categories with each type differing. We should know that these are all created by the power of karma. Of the Buddhas' Ten Powers, karmic power is the most profound. Ordinary beings often have doubts regarding this. Why is this? In this present world, we see people who practice virtues encounter misfortunes while those who are evil meet fortunate circumstances.

We declare that there is no difference between good and evil in this world. However, those who calculate this way are unable to truly understand the workings of karma. Why is this? The sūtras state that there are three kinds of karma. What are these three? First, retribution in the present life. Second, retribution in the next life. Third, retribution in future lifetimes. Karmic retribution in the present life refers to receiving the retribution of evil deeds done in this present lifetime during this very lifetime. Karmic retribution in the next life refers to receiving the retribution of deeds done in this life, whether virtuous or evil, in the next life. Karmic retribution in future lifetimes refers to receiving the retribution of deeds done in the distant past, whether virtuous or unwholesome, in the present life or in future lifetimes.

If, in the present, an evildoer seems to be well-off, this is due to karmic retribution in the future that was planted in the distant past and is now blossoming. Thus, they are able to enjoy the fruits of pleasure. How could their positive results come from the negative karma they are committing in the present? If a virtuous person is suffering, this is because negative karmic retribution in future lifetimes was planted in the distant past and is now blossoming. Their roots of wisdom are weak and they are unable to dispel this. Thus, they encounter this suffering. How could their virtuous acts in the present have brought about negative results? How do we know this? In the present, when we see people who do virtuous deeds, who are praised by others and respected by others, we know that they will surely receive the fruits of pleasure in the future. Since we have accumulated such evil karma in the past, the buddhas and bodhisattvas have taught and caused us to draw near virtuous friends to repent and reform together. Virtuous advisors are the entirety of the path, thus today, we sincerely seek refuge in the Buddha. Since beginningless time until today, we have accumulated evils as numerous as the grains of sand in the Ganges River, committed transgressions that fill the earth, and passed on from life to life without any realization or understanding. Whether we have committed the Five Grave Deeds, binding ourselves to the karmic transgression of Uninterrupted [Hell]; or committed the karma of an icchantika by severing virtuous roots; the karma of disparaging the Buddhas' words or the karma of committing various transgressions due to being unrestrained in sexual desires after puberty; or the karma of practicing imperfect virtues or dedicating merits to the Three Realms, which obstructs one's liberation from the world; these offenses are limitless and boundless. Today, we confess these before the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions to repent and reform for them all.

Through this repentance and reform of ignorance and various transgressions, may all of our unwholesome karma be eradicated, and may all of the merits and blessings born from this eradicate the transgressions of the Five Grave Deeds and eliminate the delusion of icchantikas, birth after birth, lifetime after lifetime. From now on, until reaching the sanctuary of awakening, we vow to: not commit any of these transgressions and unwholesome karmas, both major and minor; or separately, whether generally or detailed, whether minor or major, whether spoken or unspoken, may all of these categories [of transgressions] be eradicated. In repenting for these separately, we will start by repenting for the three physical [karmas], then the four verbal [karmas]. We will touch our heads to the floor to sequentially [repent] for the other obstructions. Of the three physical karmas, first is killing. As the sūtra explains, one should put oneself in the place of another and not kill or beat them. Furthermore, among the realm of fowls and beasts, all are concerned about preserving one's own life and fear death. One should see these sentient beings as one's own parents, siblings, and six types of kin since beginningless time who are transmigrating in the Six Realms due to karmic causes and conditions.

Unable to recognize each other due to changing forms between each passage of life and death, they now hurt each other and devour each other's flesh, greatly injuring their capacity for compassion. Thus, the Buddha said that upon receiving excess food, one should know that there is famine in the world and consider eating it as eating the flesh of one's own child. How much more so for those who eat fish and meat? He also said slaughtering sentient beings for incentives and capturing animals for wealth both constitute unwholesome karma. Upon dying, one will descend into the Hell of Screams. Thus, know that the transgressions of killing, harming, and consuming [sentient beings] is deeper than rivers and oceans and stacked higher than mountain peaks. Furthermore, due to this karma, we, the assembly, have not encountered virtuous friends since beginningless time. Thus, the sūtras state that the transgression of killing and harming can cause sentient beings to descend among the hells and hungry ghosts, where they undergo suffering. Or, if they are born among animals, they will be born as tigers, leopards, hyenas, wolves, eagles, or hawks; or they will be born as venomous snakes or scorpions and eternally possess wicked minds. Or, they will be born as deer and bears and live in constant fear. If they are born among humans, they will obtain two types of effects and results. The first is having many illnesses, the second is having a short lifespan. Killing, harming, and eating [sentient beings] carries infinitely many unwholesome karmic effects and results such as these. Therefore, we should seek forgiveness through repenting and reforming with utmost sincerity. Since beginningless time until today, we, the assembly, have always harbored

Whether we killed out of desire, or killed out of anger, ignorance, or pride, or used unskillful means and vowed to kill, or killed through curses, or through destroying ponds and lakes, burning mountains and forests, hunting and fishing, or through starting a fire in the wind, or by setting dogs out among hawks, we hurt all beings. Now, we repent and reform for all of these transgressions. Whether with cages, snares, pits, spits, forks, halberds, bows, or crossbows, we shot animals such as birds who were flying and beasts who were running. Whether with various kinds of nets or hooks, we caught and drained creatures which live in water such as fish, turtles, alligators, shrimp, snails, and clams.

We forced creatures who live in water, on land, and in the sky to flee and destroyed their habitats. Whether they were domesticated animals such as chickens, pigs, cows, goats, dogs, hogs, geese, or ducks, we brought them to the kitchen ourselves or sold them to slaughterhouses. Before their cries fell silent, their fur and feathers had already been ripped off, their scales and shells pierced, their heads separated from their bodies, their flesh and bones ground and sliced, then cooked and stewed in poisonous cruelty. This is for no other purpose other than to provide a momentary pleasure in taste that is extremely crude. It does not go beyond the three inches of one's tongue. However, the results from this transgression brings misfortune for kalpas into eternity. Today, we sincerely repent and reform for all transgressions such as these. Furthermore,

Transgressions such as these are limitless and boundless. Today, we confess these

Furthermore, since beginningless time until today, whether through abortions or cracking eggs, through poison or through curses, we harmed and killed sentient beings. We cultivated the land and dug the earth, planted in fields and gardens, and raised silkworms and boiled their cocoons, hurting and killing immensely. and scalded and kill insects and ants; in actions such as these, up to and including the four postures of walking, standing, sitting, and reclining, we constantly hurt and killed microscopic sentient beings which fly in the air and crawl on the ground. Because our recognition as ordinary beings is obscure, we are unawakened and unaware. Today, we confess these to repent and reform for them all. Furthermore, since beginningless time until today, whether with whips, sticks, fetters, or shackles, we oppressed, dragged, tortured, beat, and tossed sentient beings. With our hands and feet, we kicked and stomped on them, we bound, confined, and imprisoned them. We cut off their access to food and water. Through such all sorts of unskillful means such as these, we inflicted pain and suffering on sentient beings. Today, before the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions, we sincerely repent and reform for all of these.

Through the merits and virtues born from this repentance and reformation for transgressions such as killing and harming, may we obtain the vajra body in each and every lifetime, possess an inexhaustible lifespan, forever abandon hatred and spite, not have any thoughts of killing and harming sentient beings, and reach the stage of viewing all sentient beings as our only child. If we see others in danger, we will not worry about our own lives and use skillful means to rescue and liberate them, then teach them the subtle and wondrous Proper Dharma, causing all sentient beings see both form and its shadow so that they obtain peace and bliss. Upon hearing our names and listening to our voices, may all of their fears subside. We now sincerely

Having prostrated to the buddhas, again repent and reform. We, the assembly, next repent for the karma of stealing. The sutras explain that if an object belongs to someone else and is protected by someone else, one should not take even a blade of grass or a single leaf that is not given, not to mention steal. However, because sentient beings only see short-term benefits, they use all sorts of improper methods to obtain [what they want], causing them to suffer these disasters in the future. Therefore, the sūtras say that the transgression of stealing can cause sentient beings to fall into and suffer in the hell realm and hungry ghost realm. If they are in the animal realm, then they will be born as cows, horses, donkeys, mules, and camels.

Using all of their physical strength, blood, and flesh, they repay their past debts. If they are born among humans, they will serve as others' slaves, with insufficient clothes to cover their bodies and insufficient food to fill their mouths. Destitute, cold, troubled, and dissatisfied, they seek to end their own lives. Since stealing has such miserable retributions, today, we sincerely request compassion through repentance and reform. Since beginningless time until today, we, the assembly, have either stolen others' wealth and treasures or forcibly robbed them; stole personally or obtained items through coercion, through relying on public authority, or through using our own power to create grand stocks and shackles to oppress the virtuous and seize their belongings, punishing the righteous as corrupt.

Through these causes and conditions, we were caught in the net of laws. Or, we governed corruptly as we pleased, confiscated others' wealth and property, pillaged the public to benefit private entities, pillaged private entities to benefit the public, harmed someone to benefit another, harmed another to benefit someone, exploited others to enrich ourselves, and spoke of generosity while thinking of stinginess. Or, we cheated the public through bribery, smuggling, and tax evasion, or hid from authorities to avoid payment. We repent and reform for all transgressions such as these. Furthermore, since beginningless time until today, we have either taken items from the Buddha, Dharma, or Sangha that were not given, whether they were items such as sūtras or images, or items to aid the stupa or monastery, or items offered to the eternally abiding Sangha. Or, we schemed to steal the Sangha's temple possessions; or we stole, misused, cheated, or did not return the items,

We mixed up the Triple Gem's possessions and misused them, or were negligent with the community's possessions such as grains, rice, firewood, salt, bean paste, vinegar, vegetables, fungi, fruits, money, cotton, bamboo, wood, textiles, banners, canopies, incense, flowers, oil, and candles. We used them ourselves or gave them to others, or picked the Buddha's flowers and fruits or used the Sangha's robes. Because we used the Triple Gem's possessions to privately benefit ourselves, [we committed] limitless and boundless offenses such as these. Today, we are remorseful and shameful as we repent and reform for all of these. Furthermore, since beginningless time until today, we have either contended with our friends, teachers, monastics, stole in person or thought of stealing, stole things that are not of this realm, such as the possessions of ghosts, spirits, birds, beasts, and those born through the four kinds of birth; or we falsely practiced divination and physiognomy to obtain others' wealth and treasures. In this way, we even sought more profits on top of our profits, sought evil and sought excessively. We were never tired of it and were never satisfied. These offenses are limitless and boundless, and they can never be fully explained. Today, we sincerely pray to the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions to repent and reform for all of this.

We vow that through all of the merits and virtues born from this repentance and reformation of the various kinds of offenses related to stealing, may we—in each and every lifetime—obtain: the wish-fulfilling treasure, from which the Seven Treasures constantly shower forth; the finest, most exquisite robes and clothing; hundreds of delicacies; and all kinds of medicinal decoctions. May these all appear in response to our thoughts. May all sentient beings not give rise to thoughts of stealing and be able to be content with few desires, neither being lax nor defiled. May they constantly delight in generosity and practice the path of giving and aid; relinquishing their heads, eyes, marrow, and brains as if disposing of their mucus and saliva. These merits and virtues are dedicated to fulfilling danapāramitā.

We, the assembly, further repent and reform offenses of greed and desire. The sūtras state, "It is only due to desire that one is locked within the prison of ignorance and submerged in the river of birth and death without any knowledge of how to escape." Due to the causes and conditions of the five desires, sentient beings have tumbled in samsara since the distant past. Over kalpas of lifetimes, the accumulated bones of each sentient being [forms a mound] as massive as Mount Vepulla near the city of Rājagṛha. The amount of milk one has consumed from one's mother is as vast as the four oceans, the blood shed from one's body is even greater. The amount of tears shed at the death of one's father, mother, siblings, and six kinds of kin is as vast as the four oceans. Thus, it is said that through desire, there is arising. When desire is exhausted, there is cessation. Thus, know that samsara originates from greed and desire. Thus, the Sūtra states, "The offense of sexual desire is able to cause sentient beings to descend into the realms of hell, hungry ghosts, and animals and undergo suffering. We vow that through all of the merits and virtues born from this repentance and reformation of the various kinds of offenses related to sexual desire, may we—in every lifetime—be born naturally through transformation instead of from a womb; be pure, bright, and clean, possess the marks and characteristics as well as radiance [of a Buddha]; liberate the six senses; possess keen faculties; fully awaken to the nature of romance and view it as fetters and shackles; contemplate the six dusts as illusions and mirages; be resolute in abandoning the five desires and not give rise to deviant thoughts, even in our dreams; and be undisturbed by internal and external causes and conditions. Having repented and reformed as well as made vows, we return our lives in refuge and venerate the Triple Gem.

Having already repented and reformed the three physical actions, we should next repent and reform the four unwholesome verbal actions. The Sūtra states, “The offense of verbal actions is able to cause sentient beings to fall into the realms of hell, hungry ghosts, and animals and undergo suffering. If one is [reborn] among animals, one will be reborn as various kinds of owls and all who hear its cries will despise it. If one is reborn among humans, one will constantly have a stinky breath; nobody will trust or accept one’s words; one’s relatives will not be harmonious, and they will constantly enjoy quarrelling.” Seeing that verbal actions have such unwholesome effects, today, we seek refuge in the Triple Gem utmost sincerity to repent and reform for all of this.

Since beginningless time until today, we, the assembly, have committed all kinds of offenses among the Four Forms of Birth within the Six Realms due to unwholesome verbal actions. We have used coarse language and abused with language. We have yelled at, insulted, slandered, and humiliated others at the slightest dissatisfaction without any regard for status, relation, or class, hurling all sorts of malicious insults without any limit, causing them to harbor a hatred which they carried with them until the end of their lives without ever forgetting it. These conflicts continue one after the other, forming endless vengeance. Or, we have denounced heaven and earth, blamed ghosts and spirits, complained about sages, and vilified the virtuous. The karmic offenses that arise from these unwholesome words are limitless and boundless.

Speaking with flowery language and writing lines with dark ink, we composed texts which were editorialized and riddled with falsehoods, wrote songs and lyrics, described erotic scenes, and detailed sexual themes. This caused those in the middle and lower stages of cultivation to be disturbed and forget their nature. Thus, they indulged in intoxicants and sex, unable to return on their own. Or, we lost ourselves in personal grudges and forgot about justice. We made other loyal officers, filial children, loyal bureaucrats, and benevolent people write texts to sentence the innocent on false charges. Those of later generations would read the texts and believe in them, causing the accused to harbor an eternal hatred without any possibility of revealing the truth. In this way, idle chatter gives rise to limitless and boundless karmic offenses. Today, we sincerely repent and reform.

Furthermore, since beginningless time until today, we committed all kinds of offenses through divisive speech. We sang praises in others' faces while slandering them behind their backs, used sly language with hundreds of meanings, and talked about this person with another person only to also talk about another person with this person. We only considered our own benefit and never cared if we hurt others. We slandered the virtuous, sowed discord among lords and subjects, and caused them to distrust each other. We disturbed the harmony between parents and children, created distance between husbands and wives, and formed rifts between immediate and extended family. We caused teachers and students to forget their gratitude, and friends and comrades to end their journeys. We even fanned conflicts between two countries so that they would become extremely displeased with each other, leading to grudges and wars which massacre commoners. In this way, divisive speech gives rise to limitless and boundless karmic offenses.

Today, before the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions, we sincerely repent and reform for all of these.

We vow that through all of the merits and virtues born from this repentance and reformation of the four unwholesome verbal karmas, may we—in each and every lifetime—be replete with the eight kinds of voices, obtain the four kinds of eloquence, and always speak with words that bring harmony and benefit. May the sound of our voices be pure and elegant—a sound that all enjoy hearing. May we be able to skillfully understand the various languages and dialects of sentient beings. If we are to speak, may it be at the proper time and accord with those of proper conditions so that the listeners will obtain immediate liberation and awakening, transcend the ordinary and enter the sacred, as well as open their eyes of wisdom. Having repented and reformed as well as made vows, we return our lives in refuge

Having already repented and reformed the three physical and four verbal actions, we should sequentially repent and reform the obstructive transgressions committed by the six sense organs. Since beginningless time until today, we, the assembly, have had our eyes deceived by forms, become attached to black, yellow, red, green, vermillion, and purple; to precious playthings and jeweled accessories; the seductive postures of men and women, whether tall or short, dark-skinned or light-skinned; and gave rise to improper thoughts. Our ears became attached to sounds; the various musical notes played by strings, woodwinds, courtesans, and singing; the voices and laughter of men and women; and gave rise to improper thoughts.

Our noses became attached to renowned fragrances such as those of aloeswood, sandalwood, camphor, musk, turmeric, and sweetgum; and gave rise to improper thoughts. Our tongues craved the flavors of fresh, sweet, fatty flesh of sentient beings to feed the four elements [of our bodies], perpetuated more suffering; and gave rise to improper thoughts. Our bodies delighted in lavish linens, satins, embroideries, as well as all kinds of fine and smooth sensations; in the seven treasures and beautiful clothing; giving rise to improper thoughts. Our minds were often scattered and thought of eccentric and incorrect teachings. The karmic transgressions created through these six sense organs are limitless and boundless. Today, we sincerely pray to the Buddhas, honored Dharma, and sacred Sangha of the ten directions to repent and reform for all of this.

We vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the eye organ, may these eyes be able to fully see the pure, non-dual Dharma bodies of the buddhas and bodhisattvas in the ten directions; we vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the ear organ, may these ears be able to always hear the Dharma preached by buddhas and awakened beings of the ten directions and practice according to their teachings; we vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the nose organ, may these noses be able to always smell the accumulated fragrance of entering the Dharma seat and abandon the impure stench of saṃsāra; we vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the tongue organ, may these tongues be able to always eat the food of Dharma joy and meditative bliss, never craving the taste of sentient beings' flesh; we vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the body organ, may these bodies be able to wear the Tathāgata's robes and don the armor of patience, recline on the bed of fearlessness and sit on the seat of empty phenomena; we vow that through the merits and virtues of repenting and reforming [the karmic offenses of] the mind organ, may these minds be able to accomplish the ten powers, illuminate the five wisdoms, deeply contemplate the two truths, as well as the truths of emptiness and equality, enter the Dharma flow through wisdom of skillful means, become wiser with each thought, and give rise to the Tathāgata's vast, non-arising patience. Having made vows, we return our lives in refuge and venerate the Triple Gem.

Prayer of Exiting Repentance, Scroll Two

Respectfully listen! The dust disappears as one's environment stills, and the fragrance of bodhi is scattered among humans and devas. Transgressions are eradicated in the nature of emptiness, as the light of prajñā illuminates the Dharma Realm. We prostrate to the One atop the thousand-petalled throne, within the myriad-petalled lotus, the ocean of great, perfect awakening, the unsurpassed honored Bhagavān. May you bestow your awe-inspiring light and witness our sincerity. On behalf of this assembly of your disciples, we practice the Repentance Method of the Kind and Compassionate Sanctuary of Awakening. We have now completed the merits and fruitions of the second scroll. We, the assembly, are sincere and our minds give rise to earnest reverence. May the all of the merits and causes accumulated from invoking and singing the [buddhas'] profound names, exiting repentance, and entering repentance, be specially dedicated to the Honored One replete in both merits and wisdom in the Realm of True Thusness, to the Lord who is adorned by both compassion and wisdom in the Ocean of the Flower Treasury, to the bodhisattvas of the ten directions, the śrāvakas in the four fruitions, the devas who protect the Dharma, and to all virtuous sages among both the living and the deceased. May they be aided equally and benefitted universally. We also vow that our minds will be as pure as the moon until we reach the other shore of pāramitā, and that our natures will be as clear as the sky until we enter the profound gate of perfect awakening. We will always be the pillars and crossbeams of the Buddhadharma and universally benefit sentient beings of the ten directions. We reflect on our minds and reform our wrongdoings. Fearing that they have not been eradicated, we implore the honored assembly to sincerely seek repentance and reform!

Homage to Samantabhadra Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva!

[Verse of Dedication]

May kindness, compassion, joy, and equanimity fill all Dharma Realms;
May we cherish our blessings and create affinities benefitting heaven and earth;
May we practice Chan, Pure Land, precepts, and the patience of equality;
May we be humble, grateful, and bear a mind of great vows!
